radiation.

Prof. Emi-Reynolds says the rise in the use of sliding windows as part of new building technology could contribute to the build-up of radioactive particles emitted from the use of gadgets such as microwaves, mobile phones and refrigerators at homes.

He expressed these observation on the sidelines of a media workshop on Wednesday, April 26.

The workshop was aimed at creating awareness on radiation, its uses and benefits as well as its harmful effects among the media.

Prof Emi-Reynolds lamented the recent phenomenon of many Ghanaian houses being completely sealed with little ventilation.

He says though air-conditioners are meant for the tropical region, especially for buildings with sliding windows, radiations emitted from various gadgets at homes do get concentrated as a result of the enclosed buildings.

He challenged Ghanaians to allow the free flow of air by going for louvers as windows.

Department of the Authority, Abdel Razak Awudu, took participants of the workshop through radiation and its effects.

He mentioned shielding, reduction in time and increase in distance as three major ways of reducing the harmful effects of radiation. For instance, he recommended the use of ear pieces of mobile phones as the best in cases where users will have a long phone talk.

The workshop took media personnel through the regulation regime in Ghana

effective ways of implementing the regulations.

not a scientist, nor a medical doctor. I happened to be diagnosed as Hp B patient who had the kidney affected as a result. Medical Professor after examining my report, told me I had not come to the hospital early. That was in 2010. God, Allah, Mawu, Okyeadiapong Kwame, Nyamele, Yehowa, etc etc managed to save my life. I have tried to share this knowledge without help from anyone or Authority because it would save the lives of many and reduce our medical bill
If it had been drink contest I would have had sponsorship by now..
